The Copy Desk Daily provides insight on recommended news and opinion articles that have crossed our desks on their way to you.

It's not really a success story in activism, since the Panamanian government pushed the Barro Blanco dam project through. This flooded Kiad and two other riverside communities, their cemetery and ceremonial site included, while causing springs to dry up and other environmental effects. But circumstances around the process launched an investigation by the Social and Environmental Compliance Unit, an accountability mechanism established to monitor the activities of the United Nations Development Program.
