Don't sleep on tofu.

Made from soybeans, this protein-rich food is ridiculously versatile. You can eat it straight from the package (not my preferred method), marinate it, bake it, sear it, fry it or even freeze and thaw for a meatier texture.

In my gluten-free, dairy-free, mostly vegan household, tofu is a staple that we eat at least once a week. This recipe is one of my favorites. It's quick and easy, plus it has lots of space for swapping out ingredients with whatever you have on hand. I've experimented with different vegetables and even different sauces. Try teriyaki with bell peppers, for example.

Pro-tip: After you squeeze out all of the water from your tofu, tear it into small chunks rather than cut it into cubes. The jagged edges give you crispier bites.

Instructions

1. Wrap the tofu in a few layers of paper towels or a clean kitchen towel and set it on a cutting board. Place a heavy object, such as a cast iron skillet, on top of the wrapped tofu and let it sit for 10 minutes. Or, use a tofu press to drain as much liquid as possible. Pat the drained tofu dry, then dice it into 1-inch cubes. Sprinkle the salt and cornstarch on the tofu and toss well.
2. Heat the oil in a large skillet over medium-high heat. Saute the tofu for about 10 minutes, until crisp and golden on all sides. Transfer the tofu to a plate and set aside.
3. In the same skillet, combine the scallions and broccoli, adding a bit more oil if needed. Saute the vegetables for about 5 minutes, until broccoli starts to become tender.
4. Add the sweet chili sauce to the pan and bring to a simmer. Reduce the heat to medium and add the tofu back in. Allow to simmer for two minutes, until the sauce thickens and the tofu is coated. Serve over your favorite rice.
